Local Fishermen Are Expected to Include Measuring Stick in Outfit of Hooks and Lines.

ENFORCEMENT OF BASS LAW

Game Wardens Spend Afternoon at Rockford and Find Some Tiny Bass Tied on Stringers.

"Any luck?" the question was asked by a stranger of a local man who with a small boy was fishing in White River near Rockford Thursday afternoon. The local man hadn't even had a strike but a friend who was fishing nearby had just placed a bass on a stringer securely held a few feet away.

The stranger looked at the fish splashing in the water.

"To whom does this belong?" the stranger asked.

"Part to me and part to the boy," the local fisherman replied with a smile.

"Under size all right," commented the stranger. "Guess you have to explain this."

"Who are you, anyway?" asked the fisherman.

"I'm a game warden and we are out looking for fishermen who hook bass under ten inches. This one don't measure that."

The real owner of the bass then stepped into the group and explained that he had caught the bass. It cost him $20.50.

A little farther down the river another stranger approached a fisherman and engaged him in conversation. He found out that the man lived in Indianapolis.

"Where's your fishing license?" the stranger asked.

"I haven't any," the Indianapolis man replied.

"I want you to accompany me then."

It cost the Indianapolis man $20.50.

A little farther down the stream two other men were fishing with only "tolerable luck." The game warden approached them. He discovered a splashing in the water and found some bass under ten inches tied to a string. It cost each of them $20.50.

The game wardens who were so active here Thursday afternoon were Fred H. Ehlers, secretary of the game warden service, Cecil Gilpen and Leslie Bear, deputy wardens. They had been directed to make an investigation as to whether or not the fishing regulations along White River were being obeyed.

Ehlers said that the state law makes it illegal for any one to retain a bass less than ten inches in length. If a fisherman lands a bass under that size he is required to

STOLEN HORSE AND BUGGY RECOVERED BY OWNER

Found Hitched to Tree At End of South Street by Police Thursday Afternoon.

The bay driving mare and buggy belonging to Louis Bode which were stolen from a hitch rack on West Tipton street Wednesday night were located by the police Thursday afternoon hitched to a tree at the end of South street. The rig was taken to the livery stable and the horse was put up and fed. Mr. Bode came to the city late Thursday afternoon and drove the horse home.

Police believe that the horse was stolen from the rack by some one wanting to take a "joy-ride" and afterwards was afraid to drive the rig back to the place where it had been left by the owner for fear of being caught. According to residents of the neighborhood where the stolen horse was found, it was standing there early in the morning. No particular attention was paid to the horse as it was believed that the owner was nearby and for that reason the police were not notified. The horse and buggy were not damaged and everything that had been left in the buggy by the owner was found when the rig was recovered.

SCHOOL COUNT IS BEING TABULATED

Enumeration of Persons of School Age in County Will Show Little Change Since 1919.

CITY MAKES BIGGEST GAIN

Loss in Carr Township Due to Removal of Many Families to Indiana Industrial Cities.

Industrial cities in northern Indiana are growing at the loss of Jackson county and other southern Indiana communities, according to Harry B. Henderson, county superintendent of public instruction, who has completed an investigation as to the loss in the school enumeration in Carr township. The school count just completed in Carr township showed a loss of sixty-nine since 1919 and as this is exceptionally large, Mr. Henderson decided to ascertain why the enumeration should be so much smaller.

A careful check of the names reported in 1919 and missing in the enumeration this year revealed that many families were moving to northern Indiana cities where they find employment at high wages. A few families reported in 1919 and omitted in this year's enumeration have moved to farms in other townships, but the greater part of the loss is traceable to the northern Indiana movement.

The tabulation of the enumeration for this year is not completed, but the total will not be very far from that of 1919. While Seymour made a big gain, due to the extension of the corporation limits, Jackson townships' enumeration is correspondingly smaller. Gains made in some townships were offset by losses in others.

The count for this year and also for 1919 follows:

Corporation	1919	1920
Browns town	499	—
Carr	536	467
Driftwood	238	274
Grassy Fork	305	268
Hamilton	501	—
Jackson	542	396
Owen	466	462
Redding	441	407
Salt Creek	546	243
Vernon	345	389
Pershing	—	277
Washington	220	222
Brownstown Town	424	444
Crothersville	349	—
Seymour	1,653	1,872

The total for 1919 was 7,065. "An accurate total for this year cannot be given as a few corporations have not reported. However, if those not yet filed are the same as last year the total count will be 7,070, or just five more than in 1919. The count in Pershing and Salt Creek townships was made as a unit in 1919 while this year it is divided according to the new boundaries. The combined total this year shows a loss of forty since last year in the two townships.

TREES IN BLOOM

Many local people have gone to the Kinkston orchard, owned by J. J. Peter, east of the city, during the last few days to see it while the trees are in full bloom. The Rome Beauties and other varieties are blossoming presenting a scene of unusual beauty. Mr. Peter invites the public to see the orchard, but asks visitors not to molest the trees. Those desiring to drive to the place are advised to use the Frank Price road as the High street road is in bad condition.

AUTHOR OF PLUMB PLAN SPEAKS HERE

Glen E. Plumb Explain Proposed Method of Management of Transportation Systems.

SAYS IT WILL END DISPUTES

Better Service at Lower Cost to Public Will Also Be a Benefit, He Declares.

The Plumb Plan for the control and management of railroads is not the work of an individual designed for political purposes, but is the result of a crusade of millions of workers who desire to live in happiness and contentment in their own labor, according to Glen E. Plumb, of Washington, who delivered an address at the Majestic Theater Thursday night. Mr. Plumb, who is the author of the plan bearing his name, spoke here under the auspices of the Seymour Plumb Plan League. He went into considerable detail in the discussion of some of the principal features of the proposed method.

"The Plumb plan may be summarized broadly in three chapters," Mr. Plumb said. "In the first place, it provides for the return to the public of all the interests they have granted to the railways in the form of land grants. In the second place, it provides for management by a board of directors to be composed equally of representatives of the public, the employees and the officials of the railroads. In the third place it gives service at cost."

Mr. Plumb said that the courts of the country had repeatedly held that when land is given or sold to railroads it must be used uninterruptedly for transportation purposes. "The railroad is a public highway," said Mr. Plumb, "and the people retain an interest in the land even after it is turned over to the railroads by franchise."

The Plumb plan, according to the author, provides for the purchase of the railroads from their present owners at a fair price to be determined by the interstate commerce commission approved by the supreme court. The plan does not contemplate confiscation of any property belonging to others, but in taking the roads over, he said, only the physical valuation of the properties would be taken into account. In this way, he said, railroads would be taken out of politics and capital would be eliminated. The return on the actual investment would be fixed fairly.

The problem of providing service at cost, Mr. Plumb asserted, would fall upon the interstate commerce

Mexican President Reported to Have Departed Suddenly from Mexico City.

REBEL FORCES ADVANCING

One Advice Says Revolutionists Have Control of Railroad Leading to Vera Cruz.

By United Press.

Washington, May 7.—Mexican revolutionary headquarters here announced today that a dispatch had been received from Laredo reporting that President Carranza departed from Mexico City during the night. The announcement was not confirmed from official sources.

Carranza, according to the telegram, started for Vera Cruz guarded by loyal troops. Some Washington officials, doubting the accuracy of the report, pointed out that revolutionary headquarters yesterday announced they were in command of one section of the Vera Cruz railroad completing blocking Carranza in Mexico City.

MOTHER'S DAY WILL BE OBSERVED SUNDAY

Appropriate Services Will be Held at the Different Churches in the City.

Sunday, May 9, will be Mother's Day throughout the nation and appropriate services are being arranged for the occasion at the different churches in this city. Complete Unofficial Returns from Primary Place Johnson as Close Second in Race.

LANDSLIDE FOR W. T. MC CRAY

Fesler Carries Home County of Marion by One Vote Over Winner in the State.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, May 7.—Complete unofficial returns from the presidential preferential balloting in Indiana's primaries Tuesday gave the following standing today:

General Wood, 85,776; Senator Johnson, 79,829; Governor Lowden, 31,118; Senator Harding, 20,819. Plurality for Wood, 5,947.

The final returns indicate the vote was not so light as it was at first thought to have been. The total vote of the Republicans, according to these figures, was approximate 217,500.

McCray has a majority of 4,081 over the field in the Republican governorship race. The vote from 3,373 of the 3,387 precincts gave McCray 108,907, Fesler 63,591, and Toner 41,235.

In the Democratic governorship race complete returns from eighty-six county and incomplete returns from the other six gave McCulloch a plurality of 25,252 over his nearest rival. The vote was McCulloch, 45,351; Niblack 20,099; Isenbarger, 17,464; Risk, 14,480.

Complete official returns from Marion county in which Indianapolis is located gave Harding 1,028, Johnson, 5,610; Lowden, 3,358, and Wood 13,485.

The returns show James Fesler, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, carried his home county by a plurality of one vote over Warren T. McCray. The standing in this contest was Fesler, 10,312; McCray, 10,311; Toner, 2,295.

COURT OVERRULES ABATEMENT PLEA

Judge Anderson Holds Court Did Not Deliver Pre-judicial Instructions in Coal Cases.

INDIANA MINERS IN COURT

Action of Judge Also Applies to Plea Filed by Operators to Grand Jury Indictments.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, May 7.—Judge Anderson in United States district court today overruled a plea in abatement filed by Charles Evans Hughes as chief counsel for defense in the government's case against 125 coal men indicted on charges of violating the Lever act. The effect of the court's ruling was that the court did not deliver pre-judicial instructions to the now famous "coal grand jury" which investigated the entire coal industry since the lever law was enacted.

When the cases were called for arraignment yesterday Hughes filed a plea in abatement charging that Judge Anderson gave instructions to the grand jury which were pre-judicial to John Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and other defendants. Later a similar plea was entered in behalf of the Indiana operators and this also was overruled.

Only thirty-eight of the operators indicted appeared in court. All of them were from Indiana. All those from Ohio, Pennsylvania and Illinois were absent pending the outcome of a suit in federal court in which they are contesting removal proceedings.

The miners in court today were from Pennsylvania and Indiana. Those from Ohio and Illinois awaited the outcome of the arraignment. Arguing on a replication filed by the government to the plea in abatement, Dan Simms, special district attorney, cited a similar case in the New York court of appeals in which the court was upheld in giving similar instructions to the grand jury.

Referring to the assertion of Hughes yesterday that no cases could be found bearing on the issue more clearly than two quoted by Hughes, Simms asserted that the former supreme court justice must have been talking in a playful manner and that "perhaps the counsel meant to say 'April fool'."

Hughes replied to this with a declaration that in all his practices he had never been forced to indulge in personalities and that he would pay no attention to Simms' statement and treat them as the decorum of the court deserves.

WIDELY KNOWN INDIANA RAILROAD OFFICIAL DEAD

N. A. Boomer, General Manager of Lake Erie & Western, Expires Suddenly at Lima, O.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, May 7.—The body of N. A. Boomer, general manager of the Lake Erie & Western railroad, who died in his private car at Lima, O., last night from apoplexy, was returned to this city today for burial.

In point of continuous service within the state, Mr. Boomer was one of the oldest railroad operating officials in Indiana. He had been identified with railroad lines of the state for more than thirty years.

Mr. Boomer was born in Philo, Ill., and started in the railroad business as a telegrapher at Edwardsville, Ill. He also served in various capacities at Frankfort and Lafayette, Indiana.

NO UNEMPLOYED NOW.

Local people frequently comment that tramps and professional beggars are seldom seen. Until a few years ago a "hobo" camp east of the city was a popular meeting place for the transient unemployed. Men physically able to work could be found there at almost any hour of the night or day. But such camps throughout the country have practically disappeared. The work or fight order issued during the war did much to eliminate them. Men went to work at that time and many of them got the habit of work which has kept them busy.

Another reason for the absence of tramps is that there is a shortage of labor. The public has no sympathy for an able bodied man who refuses to become a producer and tries to beg his living from others. There is no place in the world today for drones. Production is much under the demand and every one capable of contributing honest labor is expected to do so. Society expects and demands it.

The labor situation in every large city is serious. Factories are unable to find sufficient men to maintain operation at full capacity. At Louisville the police are to make a survey of the male population to ascertain if any one is out of work. Officers will question men as they enter motion picture shows and other places of amusement. The man who is employed and is contributing what he can to society will be glad to assist the Louisville officers in locating others who are failing in their duty to their fellowmen.

It will be a long time before the professional tramp will have a reasonable excuse to resume his occupation of unemployment. Fields of activity are in need of labor of all kinds. The man who is out of work today stays out because he doesn't want to work.

Strange things happen. Two years ago Barleson pointed out very clearly how the government could soon own all the telegraph and telephone lines. Instead of turning over evidences of ownership he has just asked congress to appropriate $14,000,000 to square up his transaction. He explains that the indebtedness resulted because some of the companies were not paying investments, which is another way of saying that the government is "stung."

A New Jersey girl has received damages of six cents in a breach of promise suit, which is probably the jury's estimate of the worth of the man in the case.

commission which would fix rates in proportion to the necessary cost of operation. A budget of the preceding year would be prepared and the rates would be based upon this. If it were found that any surplus remained at the end of any year it would be divided equally between the public and the employees. The public's share, he said, would be in the form of better service, while the employees would share in larger wages. In offering this plan he said he believed that the interest in the business of the roads would prevent labor troubles as each man would feel that he is part of the organization. Individual interest always results in better service, he said.

Mr. Plumb declared that under the present system the price of necessary commodities were increased in greater proportion than the advance in wages. Labor organizations look not only to wage and working conditions, but also assume protection over the consumer. Approximately one-third of the total population of the country, he said, is supported by organized labor. Freight charges enter into the cost of every commodity, he asserted, and if tariffs were reduced that would start everything on a downward grade with the result that living would not be out of proportion to wages.

Plumb bitterly attacked the Esch-Cummins railroad bill as the "most vicious piece of legislation that ever came out of Washington." He said that the railroads wrote the measure and deceived congress into enacting it by stating that it would prevent the chaotic condition of railroad lines which now exists. He condemned the section of the bill which guaranteed the owners a return of at least six per cent on their investment. He said the bill creates a "preferred class" which holds a lien on railroad property. Because of the fixed guarantee, he said, there is no incentive to improve service or reduce expenses as the owners are sure of getting their dividends regularly.

The men who own the railroads, he said, should have such return as is reasonable for that kind of an investment and the rest of the earnings should go to the public and the men who keep the transportation systems in operation.

The speaker was introduced by the Rev. F. A. Hayward. After the address Ivan Love, secretary of the local Plumb Plan League, explained the purposes of the organization. The meeting was dismissed by the Rev. W. E. Carroll.

The address was heard by a large crowd representing many interests in this city. Mr. Plumb who is speaking in a number of cities in the middle west in the interest of his plan, was accompanied here by Mrs. Plumb.

SOCIAL EVENTS

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER.

Mrs. Herman Pollert, 411 West Brown street, entertained a large number of guests Thursday evening with a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Augusta Pollert, a bride-elect. The shower was arranged as a surprise to Miss Pollert.

The evening was delightfully spent with music, games and contests, and the gifts were presented to the bride-elect by Miss Irma Kasting. They were arranged in a large basket, beautifully decorated with pink and white. A dainty luncheon was served.

Those who attended were Misses Irma Kasting, Gracia Hauenschild, Pauline Gerdum, Lucille Pickrell, Inez Taskey, Lila Nieman, Lydia Busse, Adelia Kasting, Laura Beckman, Mayne Manns, Frieda Sierp, Edna Meyers, Bernice Pickrell, Mrs. Wm. Rehber, Mrs. George Mascher, Mrs. H. Heppenstall, Mrs. E. Steinwedel, Mrs. A. Kasting, Mrs. Joe Schrenk, Mrs. A. Breitfield, Mrs. Cora Nieman, Mrs. Earl Watson, Mrs. E. Moritz, Mrs. Fred Snyder.

Miss Pollert, whose marriage will take place soon to Mr. Arthur Kasting, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Pollert. She is popular among a large number of friends. The groom-elect is a son of Mrs. Anna Kasting, and is employed with the Ahlbrand Carriage Company.

COMMUNITY PLAY.

The following is taken from the Franklin Star. A number of Seymour people are included in the cast of characters:

"Our Minister's Honeymoon" was the title of the operetta given Friday night at the Community church by the Katamena club. The entertainment consisted of fourteen musical numbers with enough dialogue to make an interesting plot.

Probably no one character pleased the audience more than the part of the old sexton taken by Ott Barker. His make-up and interpretation of the part were both fine. The song, "That's just what I've been a thinking" by the old sexton and the two old maids, "who suspect something" parts taken by Miss Pearl Day and Mrs. Elba Coy, was heartily enjoyed.

The costumes were a collection of several generations of wedding finery and were greatly appreciated. Twenty-five members of the club took part in the play. The mite society members were Mrs. Harry Ray, Mary Tilson, Mrs. Joe Vest and Mrs. Virgil Tilson. The ushers were Uriel Hadley, Chas. Dungan, and Virgil Tilson.

SENIOR BANQUET.

As a concluding feature of a contest recently conducted by the members of the Senior class, the members of the winning team were guests at a banquet given by the losers in the high school gymnasium Thursday evening. The members of the faculty were also guests. The contest was conducted to promote the sale of the high school Annals, and Miss Doris Norbeck was captain of the winning team and Oren Lewis, of the losing.

Oren Lewis acted as toastmaster and several of the members of the class spoke.

The gymnasium was decorated in the Senior Class colors, black and white.

HAY RIDE.

The members of the Senior Class of the Brownstown high school and a few invited guests attended a hay ride given Thursday evening. The party went to the home of Miss Avis Lucas, near Pleasant Grove, a member of the class, where the evening was spent.

Those who attended were Hazel and Lillian Chubb, Margaret Spurgeon, Doris Sewell, Gladys Heller, Charity Martin, Blanch McMillan, Christine Innes, Lou Wallace Downing, Ferris Thompson, Joe Davis, Robert McCord and Albert Anderson.

WILL BE MARRIED SUNDAY.

The marriage of Miss Louisa Ahlbrand, of Jonesville, and Otto Wieneke, of Seymour, will take place Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ahlbrand, one mile north of Jonesville. The groom-elect is in the employ of the postoffice department. A number of local people will attend the wedding.

T. M. H. CLUB.

Miss Minnie Eastridge will entertain the members of the Brownstown T. M. H. Club this evening. Miss Eastridge has been teaching in the Brownstown schools and will leave in a few days for her home.

MOONLIGHT PICNIC.

About thirty-five members of the Epworth League of the Trinity Methodist church attended the moonlight picnic held on the river near Rockford Thursday evening. The trip was made by motor.

Popcorn and wieners were cooked over a large bonfire, and the evening was spent with singing and games.

RELIANCE DANCE.

The Reliance Manufacturing Company, Columbus, will be host to the employees of the factory, and a large number of guests, at a spring dance to be held in the large factory this evening. Guests are expected to attend from Chicago, Bedford, North Vernon, Washington and Seymour.

AID SOCIETY.

Mrs. Frank Kasting, South Chestnut street, entertained the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Trinity Methodist church Thursday afternoon. A luncheon was served.

CLASS MEETING.

A meeting of the Clio's Class of the St. Paul Sunday School was held Thursday evening in the church parlors.

A-Z ROOK CLUB.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Griffiths delightfully entertained the members of the A-Z Rook Club Thursday evening.

PERU WOMAN WISHES TO BE DELEGATE TO CONVENTION

Mrs. E. A. Gould, Active in Women's Club Work, Seeks Vote in Republican Conclave.

Mrs. E. A. Gould, of Peru, who is known to many local women as an active worker in club activities, seeks a place on the Indiana delegation to the Republican national convention in Chicago. Mrs. Gould spent considerable time in this city during the last legislature in behalf of the equal franchise law. During her activity here she met many Seymour women, who will be interested in the following Indianapolis dispatch:

Mrs. E. A. Gould, well known women's club worker of Peru, will seek a place on the Eleventh district delegation to the republican national convention at Chicago, according to an announcement by Mrs. Richard Edwards, of Peru. Mrs. Gould is a member of the republican state women's executive committee and Eleventh district chairman of the League of Women Voters.

"Mrs. Gould's candidacy has been indorsed by Hurd Hurst, Miami county republican chairman, and other prominent republicans," said Mrs. Edwards. "She is now in Connecticut working for the last state necessary to insure ratification of the suffrage amendment and in her absence her candidacy will be looked after by her friends."

"Mrs. Gould is of an old republican family and she would be satisfactory to the entire district as a member of the delegation."

Mrs. Gould is the second member of the Indiana League of Women Voters to announce her candidacy for a place on a national convention delegation. Mrs. Alice Foster Melulloch, of Fort Wayne, is seeking a place on the delegation at large to the democratic national convention at San Francisco.

The League of Women Voters, which recently held a convention here, passed a resolution calling on both the republican and democratic parties to include women on their national delegations. The move on the part of the women was well received by political leaders and there are indications that they will provide places for the women aspirants.

Other districts may also bring out women delegate candidates under a move instituted by Mrs. A. H. Beardsley, of Elkhart, president of the league. She has sent letters to officials of the organization asking them to encourage women to become candidates for the places.

We Do "Printing That Pleases."

Mrs. Lola Curry, Medora, was in the city Thursday the guest of her mother, Mrs. Mary Hunsucker.

THE STORY OF SMOCKS

The story of smocks is long already—and it is to be continued. Their popularity grows and has not reached its peak; hence designers are giving a great deal of attention to varying and elaborating this graceful garment. Just now crepe de chine and crepe georgette are oftenest employed for making the smock, either of them providing a suitable background for rich embroideries and beautiful stitching done in silk or yarn or beads. Hand painting, outlined with silk floss, has made its appearance among the latest embellishments.

The smock shown here is a dark blue crepe de chine. About the bottom there is a border of embroidered grapes and leaves, in several colors. The neck is outlined with an embroidered band which is repeated at each side over the shoulders.

CAPTAIN EARNEST HILL, of Portland, Me., who says he was not able to report for duty before taking Tanlac. Declares he feels like a new man now and is on deck every day ready for work.

"I feel just like a new man since I began taking Tanlac and I am not only willing, but I am anxious to tell other people what this medicine has done for me," said Captain Ernest Hill, Portland, Me., recently.

Captain Hill is in command of the Ben Hur, plying between Portland and Casco Bay. He has been in the service for ten years and is held in high regard as an officer and citizen by all who know him.

"I have suffered from indigestion and stomach trouble for the past eight years," continued Captain Hill, "and at the time I started taking Tanlac I was in such a weakened condition I could hardly stand up. When I walked I would actually stagger like a drunken man and, at times, would have to hold on to something to keep from falling. After every meal I would simply suffer torment. My food would sour and I would swell up so with gas I could hardly get my breath.

I would also have awful smothering spells at night and sometimes I would have to get up to get my breath. Lots of times I would have to open the windows and doors to let in fresh air, or go out into the open air in order to get my breath. I could not find anything to do me any good and along toward the last I became so weak and nervous I could not do my work.

"Five bottles of Tanlac have made a wonderful change in my condition. It helped me from the very first dose and now I feel as good as I did when I was twenty years old. I sleep fine and have a fine appetite and just feel like a new man in every way. I am now able to be on deck every day ready for duty."

Tanlac is sold in Seymour by Maxon's Pharmacy, and in Crothersville by C. W. Taulman, and in Browns-town by Chas. Brock.

SORTING PAPER TO RETURN TO MILLS.

This photograph shows men in Salvation Army Industrial Home sorting waste paper to be returned to mills for remanufacture into print paper. More than 7,000 tons waste paper was sorted and baled by these men in Indianapolis in the past year.

SALVATION ARMY HELPS COUNTRY IN CRISIS OF PAPER SHORTAGE

ORGANIZATION WHICH PLANS APPEAL FOR FUNDS MAY 10-20 HAS BEEN COLLECTING PAPER FOR YEARS—RECORDS COME TO LIGHT WHEN FRIENDS INVESTIGATE ARMY ACTIVITIES.

The Salvation Army which is planning a nation-wide appeal for $10,000,000, May 10-20, to carry on its relief work for another year, comes to the foreground in the present paper crisis with figures to show that it has done more than any other organization to help out the newspapers and magazines in the paper situation. Computations made at Salvation Army headquarters indicate that 50,000 tons of waste paper have gone back to the mills from the various Army corps constituting a vast saving of valuable material for print paper manufacture.

Realizing the importance of saving waste paper and returning it to the mills, the Salvation Army ten years ago became a pioneer in the business of collecting and baling paper for return to the mills. Since then the Army has been responsible for saving more than a quarter of a million tons, according to computations made recently at national headquarters, 122 West 14th street, New York city.

Had the Salvationists not gathered this enormous volume of waste paper, baled it and returned it to the paper mills to be remanufactured, much of it into newspaper, the paper would have been destroyed by householders and stores, or otherwise destroyed and lost to the publishing industry.

Gives Jobs to Unemployed.

Collection and sorting of the paper was originally put in the hands of the countless unemployed men whom the Salvation Army never refuses to help. Money raised from the sale of the baled waste paper maintains eighty-four industrial homes in various parts of the country.

Although no record of the vast amount of paper collected in Indiana alone has been computed, the books of Staff Captain Catlin of Indianapolis corps show that more than 7,000 tons of waste paper and 31,115 hundredweight in rags have been saved and sent out from that city. This represents the amount collected within a radius of 20 miles from the heart of the city, and the work of men and six horses and wagons kept constantly busy gathering up the paper. Homeless men, living at the Salvation Army industrial home were employed to do the sorting and baling.

None of the $429,000 which is the Indiana state quota, set by the citizen's state committee under the direction of Major Arthur R. Robinson, veteran of the world war, to be raised during the home service appeal in Indiana, is used to promote the gathering of waste paper. This branch of Salvation Army work is kept up merely as a means of giving employment to men in search of work, and to help support the industrial home. At the present time when waste paper is much in demand at all paper mills, the revenue from bales of waste paper figures in helping offset the expenses of maintaining the industrial home, according to Captain Catlin, of Indianapolis.

The task of sorting the paper after it is collected in the wagons and brought to headquarters at 24 South Capitol avenue, Indianapolis, is given to unemployed men who come to the Salvation Army offices looking for work.

Use Care in Sorting.

The paper is dumped from receptacles in which it has been collected to a flat top table setting beside a hole in the floor about four by six feet square. At first the uncrumpled newspapers are taken out and sent down the hole in the floor to the baling press directly below in the basement.

After the press is full of paper up to the floor, it is closed and the loose paper inside is compressed by the machine, with the aid of a great lever. Then it is tied automatically and when the press is opened a bale is ready to go—weighing on an average of eight to nine hundredweight to the bale.

After that the straight sheets and flat pieces, such as old envelopes and letters are sorted and tossed into the hole, where they in turn are compressed and come out in bales weighing about 800 pounds. Next craft paper—the brown wrapping paper, valuable because of its qualities of toughness, is separated and baled. Bales of this paper usually weigh between five and seven hundredweight, owing to the bulkiness of the paper which prevents compression.

Return Paper to Mills.

Finally the crumpled paper is left on the tables. It follows the same process as the rest, making bales averaging five hundredweight. The bales are sent directly to the mills by the railroad, whenever twenty-four bales are ready to go. An average shipment at Indianapolis headquarters, according to Captain Catlin, is one carload a week.

"We would have obtained this year three times the paper we did if the thousands of men formerly given work in house-to-house paper canvassing were not in good paying industrial jobs, and if the number of schools, churches and other organizations, had not taken some of our 'trade' away from us, by soliciting paper ahead of us for money for school libraries and pianos," said Captain Catlin. "People who do not know that industrial homes are not helped by the home service fund do not realize that they are greatly curtailing our opportunity to help the down and outer by refusing to let us have their waste paper as they did in the past. The Salvation Army can handle the return of the paper to the mills more efficiently than other organizations because it has made a business of doing this work and has all the equipment for baling and sending it out."

Repays Benefactors.

Captain Otto Beasley, commander of the Terre Haute post of the Salvation Army, tells the following story in connection with his work in Terre Haute.

"Five months ago, the Salvation Army gave aid to a man in trouble. It was only one incident among many forgotten by everyone except one man."

Shortly after, the Army bought a piano for our headquarters from a leading merchant in Terre Haute. Being short of funds, we bought it on credit.

"A few weeks later a man, plainly one to whom money came through real labor, and even then not a surplus, called at the merchant's store and settled the Salvation Army's account, which amounted to about $150. He didn't give his name, but simply said:

"Five months ago they helped me; now I want to do this for them."

WOMAN'S BELIEF SURE TO FOLLOW MORE BENEFITS

Intends to Continue Using Trutona to Add Reserve Strength to Her System.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 6—Mrs. Ruth Mulryan, a well-known young Indianapolis woman who lives at 412 West Henry street, is deeply grateful for the remarkable work Trutona did in her case. One needs to read her following statement to become convinced that Trutona is possessed of unusual merit. Below is what Mrs. Mulryan said about the perfect tonic the other day.

"I was taken down sick a week ago last Wednesday with a terrible headache, I had a high fever and my back pained me dreadfully. In fact, it seemed that every bone in my body ached. I could hardly stand it."

"I was advised to try Trutona and it certainly worked like magic on my system. From the very first I started to improve, and today, I'm able to do my own work again. The pain in my back has disappeared and my head doesn't trouble me any more."

"I intend to continue using Trutona, for if one bottle will do so much good, I'm sure there are further benefits in it for me. I'm thankful for the relief Trutona gave me and I hope every one troubled as I was, will try this wonderful medicine."

Trutona's healthful action reaches every portion of the body, and performs its work faithfully and efficiently. Trutona rebuilds diseased nerves and tissues, creates a healthful appetite and assists in the assimilation and digestion of the food.

Trutona is now being introduced and explained in Seymour at W. L. Federmann's Drug Store.

RISE IN LIVING COST RESULT IN KAPP REVOLT

Larger Cities in Germany Faced Scanty Food Supplies After Recent Revolution.

By United Press.

Berlin, May 7—Remarkable price increases, with growing shortages in food supplies, were the immediate after-effects of the Kapp "putsch" and the attendant general strike. While these effects were a couple of weeks in manifesting themselves, they had become fairly pronounced in the early weeks of April.

The larger cities had lived from their refrigerator warehouse supplies of food during the strikes, and they were left with only a narrow margin. Railroad traffic was so disrupted that it was a difficult problem to catch up in lost distribution, and as a result food supplies existent in the country were slow in reaching the cities.

This naturally meant an increase in the cost of supplies, and while it was most noticeable in the matter of food, it was almost equally applicable to clothing, shoes, and other essentials of life.

While the poor felt the pinch first, it was noticeable that the better grade restaurants—being outside the rationing law—also were touched by the situation. Butter was unobtainable. Several kinds of meat previously on the bills of fare were either enormously costly or almost entirely lacking. Cheese brought in from Holland and Denmark almost disappeared.

At about the time of the Kapp "putsch," the government had asked for new food credits in America, and negotiations were still under way for obtaining new supplies at the time this article was written. Assurances, however, were at hand that the government would be able to get more food from America through the means of privately established credits, though official and unofficial sources are carefully checking up on the German needs for the coming year with respect to food and raw materials.

established credits, though official and unofficial sources are carefully checking up on the German needs for the coming year with respect to food and raw materials.

Coincident with the rise in prices following the "putsch," there was a remarkable stiffening of the German valuta so that Germany was in a better position to buy in the Ausland than for a couple of months previous. Incidentally, the foreigner—much reviled by the German because he had such an advantage from the exchange rate—began to find that costs were approaching those of his homeland.

In connection with the matter of German purchases in foreign countries, it is interesting to note that the German does not realize that America is not in a position to make big loans as readily as heretofore. He does not realize that the masses of money America made before her entry into the war have been spent in improved standards of living, and that there is no great fluid mass of credit now available, especially since America faces high taxes and doesn't want them increased through foreign loans.

SECRET SINN FEIN ARMY AGGREGATES 150,000 MEN

Each Man Held Responsible for Concealment of Uniform and Equipment.

By United Press.

Dublin, May 7—The secret Sinn Fein "Army of the Irish Republic" now aggregates more than 15,000 men, according to claims made by Sinn Fein officials.

Some hitherto unpublished details of the organization and equipment of this "underground" army were given the United Press by a member of the Sinn Fein cabinet who has been active in the work of organization and holds high rank in the "army."

He declared that the organization is completely equipped with small arms, such as rifles and revolvers and "a certain amount of ammunition." Most of the "troops" have their own uniforms. Owing to the necessity of keeping their equipment hidden, each man is made responsible for the custody and concealment of his own rifle and uniform. Neither the officers nor men receive any pay.

"Our army is well organized in companies, battalions and regiment on exactly the same lines as any other army," the Sinn Feiner said. "Each town, village and district has its company or battalion, which is known by the name of the district. For instance, here in Dublin there are four battalions. I organized and drilled the South Dublin battalion."

"In spite of the strict surveillance of the police and English troops drilling is going on constantly. Almost every night within a few miles of the center of Dublin I could show you units of our army at drill. At present most of our attention is centered upon drilling for guerrilla warfare and scouting."

"The men of the Dublin battalions are summoned to drill by couriers and advised of the time and exact spot—usually an isolated field in the hills back of Dublin. They straggle in by foot or bicycle in their ordinary clothes without arms of any sort. It's too risky to attempt to drill in uniform or with arms."

"As a matter of fact, the drilling now is mainly designed to keep up the interest and spirit of the men and maintain the organization intact."

"The drilling is usually held before midnight to allow the men to get home in plenty of time without arousing suspicion. Sometimes we hold drills in broad daylight on Sundays and holidays in out-of-the-way places in the country near-by. Pickets are posted on all roads nearby and signals arranged to warn of the approach of police or troops."

"Naturally the names of our officers are kept secret, but sometimes they become known. For instance, the Lord Mayor of Cork was commandant of the Cork organization, which was well known. In fact, we turned out hundreds of troops in full uniform at his funeral and the English troops were afraid to interfere."

"Of course, our equipment of arms is limited to rifles and revolvers, bombs, and a few machine guns of various kinds owing to their origin. Many of the rifles have been captured from the English and others are sporting rifles—in fact, any kind of a firearm that will shoot. Unlike any other regularly organized army in the world, we have to keep everything hidden. We are constantly adding to our caches of arms by raids upon police barracks and captures from small bodies of English troops."

explained the present policy regarding the use of the army. He declared that there was no idea among moderate Sinn Feiners of an organized rebellion or attack upon the British forces.

"Our only hope now is to continue the species of guerrilla warfare in an effort to make it as uncomfortable for the English army of occupation as possible. We realize that it would be folly to attempt an attack in force. The English are heavily armed with tanks and armored cars and heavy artillery. We would have little chance against such a formidable armament."

"But they have little defense against sporadic attacks upon isolated outposts and guerrilla warfare."

"The very existence of our army is a weapon in reserve even if we never use it. It's like this: You may be a very big strong man and able to whip a certain little man, but the very fact that he will scratch you up considerably in the scuffle makes you respect him to a certain extent. We'd never be able to win now in a regular fight but we'd scratch up the other side considerably."

THE "PROOF OF THE PUDDING"

What The Women Themselves Say

There are a lot of manufacturers who can claim a lot of things for their products. Some of these claims are proved by long experience—and some of them by hurried tests. They may or may not be what you and I think.

The best way, though, is to find out what the people who use the product claim. Then, everything put into the advertisement comes right from the heart of the users.

Here's what women say about Joy—the wonder soap that "works like a wizard."

"I never knew housecleaning could be done so quickly, easily and pleasantly until I tried Joy Soap!" "Joy is a true name, for it is certainly a joy to the women who use it!" "I use Joy Soap for washing clothes, cleaning house and washing dishes. It is the best soap I ever saw!" "I didn't know that housework could be done with any except old, smelly yellow soaps until I tried Joy. It was a revelation. The fine, firm cakes of white soap look and feel so much better that I just know they work better."

When thousands of women praise a product like that, it must be an extraordinarily good product.

Joy Soap is. You just can't keep from liking it, because it gives you so much more real value for your money and it makes the most distasteful work so much more pleasant. Ask your grocer for Joy and prove it.

The VALLEY of the GIANTS

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of "Cappy Ricks"

With the descent upon his breast of the limp body of his big woods-bully, Colonel Pennington had been struck to earth as effectively as if a fair-sized tree had fallen on him, the last whiff of breath had been driven from his lungs, and for the space of a minute, during which Jules Rondeau lay heavily across his midriff, the Colonel was quite unable to get it back. Pale, gasping, and jarred from soul to suspenders, he was merely aware that something unexpected and disconcerting had occurred.

While the Colonel fought for his breath, his woodsmen remained in the offing, paralyzed into inactivity by reason of the swiftness and thoroughness of Bryce Cardigan's work; then Shirley motioned to them to remove the wreckage, and they hastened to obey.

Freed from the weight on the geometric center of his being, Colonel Pennington stretched his legs, rolled his head from side to side, and snorted violently several times like a buck. After the sixth snort he felt so much better that a clear understanding of the exact nature of the catastrophe came to him; he struggled and sat up, looking around him a little wildly.

"Where—did—Cardigan—go?" he gasped.

One of his men pointed to the timber into which the enemy had just disappeared.

"Surround him—take him," Pennington ordered. "I'll give a month's pay—to each of—the six men that bring—that scoundrel to me. Get him—quickly! Understand?"

Not a man moved. Pennington shook with fury. "Get him," he croaked. "There are enough of you to do—the job. Close in on him—everybody. I'll give a month's pay—to—everybody."

A man of that indiscriminate mixture of Spaniard and Indian known in California as cholo swept the circle of men with an alert and knowing glance. His name was Flavio Arletan, but his straight black hair, dark russet complexion, beady eyes, and hawk nose gave him such a resemblance to a fowl that he was known among his fellows as the Black Minorena, regardless of the fact that this sobriquet was scarcely fair to a very excellent breed of chicken. "That offer's good enough for me," he remarked in businesslike tones. "Come on—everybody. A month's pay for five minutes' work. I wouldn't tackle the job with six men, but there are twenty of us here."

"Hurry," the Colonel urged them. Shirley Sumner's flashing glance rested upon the Black Minorena. "Don't you dare!" she cried. "Twenty to one! For shame!"

"For a month's pay," he replied impudently, and grinned evilly. "And I'm takin' orders from my boss." He started on a dog-trot for the timber, and a dozen men trailed after him.

Shirley turned helplessly on her uncle, seized his arm and shook it frantically. "Call them back! Call them back!" she pleaded.

Her uncle got uncertainly to his feet. "Not on your life!" he growled, and in his cold gray eyes there danced the lights of a thousand devils. "I told you the fellow was a ruffian. Now, perhaps, you'll believe me. We'll hold him until Rondeau revives, and then—"

Shirley guessed the rest, and she realized that it was useless to plead—that she was only wasting time. "Bryce! Bryce!" she called. "Run! They're after you. Twenty of them! Run, run—for my sake!"

His voice answered her from the timber: "Run? From those cattle? Not from man or devil." A silence. Then: "So you've changed your mind, have you? You've spoken to me again!" There was triumph, exultation in his voice. "The timber's too thick, Shirley. I couldn't get away anyhow—so I'm coming back."

She saw him burst through a thicket of alder saplings into the clearing, saw a half dozen of her uncle's men close in around him like wolves around a sick steer; and at the shock of their contact, she moaned and hid her face in her trembling hands.

Half man and half tiger that he was, the Black Minorena, as self-appointed leader, reached Bryce a first. The cholo was a squat, powerful little man, with more bounce to him than a rubber ball; leading his men by a dozen yards, he hesitated not an instant but doiged under the blow Bryce lashed out at him and came up inside the latter's guard, feeding for Bryce's throat. Instead he met Bryce's knee in his abdomen, and forthwith he folded up like an accordion.

The next instant Bryce had stooped, caught him by the slack of the trousers and the scruff of the neck and thrown him, as he had thrown Rondeau, into the midst of the men advancing to his aid. Three of them went down backward; and Bryce, charging over them, stretched two more with well-placed blows from left to right, and continued on across the clearing, running at top speed, for he realized that for all the desperation of his fight and the losses already inflicted on his assailants, the odds against him were insurmountable.

Seeing him running away, the Laguna Grande woodsmen took heart and hope and pursued him. Straight for the leading donkey at the dog-leading Bryce ran. Beside the donkey stood a neat tier of firewood; in the chopping block, where the donkey-freeman had driven it prior to abandoning his post to view the contest between Bryce and Jules Rondeau, was a double-bitted axe. Bryce jerked it loose, swung it, whirled on his pursuers, and rushed them. Like turkeys scattering before the raid of a coyote they fled in divers directions and from a safe distance turned to gaze apprehensively upon this demon they had been ordered to bring in.

Bryce lowered the axe, removed his hat, and mopped his moist brow. From the center of the clearing men were crawling or staggering to safety—with the exception of the Black Minorena, who lay moaning softly. Colonel Pennington, seeing his fondest hopes expire, lost his head completely. "Get off my property, you savage!" he shrieked.

"Don't be a nut, Colonel," Bryce returned soothingly. "I'll get off—when I get good and ready, and not a second sooner. In fact, I was trying to get off as rapidly as I could when you sent your men to bring me back. Prithce why, old thing? Didst crave more conversation with me, or didst want thy camp cleaned out?"

He started toward Pennington, who backed hastily away. Shirley stood her ground, bending upon Bryce, as he approached her, a cold and disapproving glance. "I'll get you yet," the Colonel declared from the shelter of an old stump behind which he had taken refuge.

"Talking dogs never bite, Colonel. And that reminds me: I've heard enough from you. One more cheep out of you, my friend, and I'll go up

ELI AND HIS SONS. 1 Sam. 2:12; 27:36; 4:1-18.

May be used with temperance application.

GOLDEN TEXT—The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.—Rom. 6:23.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL.—1 Sam. 2:22, 23; 3:1-14; 4:1-10; 6:1-18. Eph. 6:1-4.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Calls the Boy Samuel

JUNIOR TOPIC—Eli and His Sons

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Sowing and Reaping

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Responsibility of Parents and Children

1. The Wickedness of Eli and His Sons 2:12-17, 27:36.

1. Eli's sons (vv. 12-17, 22). The behavior of these sons is in strange contrast to that of the boy Samuel. Eli's sons were priests and ministered in the things of the sanctuary, but "knew not the Lord" (v. 12).

(1) Graft (vv. 12-17). This greed was practiced upon the worshippers who brought their sacrifices to the sanctuary, according to God's law. God ordained that the priests should have the breasts and shoulders of the animals which were brought to the altar (Ex. 29:27; Lev. 7:34, 32). The degenerate sons of Eli were not content with this, but demanded more, and even sought to obtain it by force (v. 16). Moreover, they lifted out with a fork certain choice portions while raw, and had them roasted. Such behavior on the part of the priests was revolting to the worshippers and resulted in the abhorrence of the Lord's offerings.

2. Eli (vv. 27-36). Eli was seemingly a good man, but he seriously erred before God in that he failed to discipline his sons (vv. 22-24). He knew of their sins and was conscious of his obligation, but his fatherly heart led him into a sentimental indulgence; his love got the better of his judgment. Eli was content with a weak remonstrance. He was under obligation not merely to speak against it, but should have acted against it.

II. Eli and His Sons Punished (4:1-18).

They at last came to reap what they had sown. God has appointed a day of judgment (Acts 17:31). There is a harvest time for the sinner as well as for the righteous (Joel 3:13). If one has sown to the wind he shall reap the whirlwind. The Philistines made war upon Israel and defeated to my logging-camp, return here with a crew of bluesnoses and wild Irish and run your wops, bohunks, and cholos out of the county. I don't fancy the class of labor you're importing into this county, anyhow."

The Colonel, evidently deciding that discretion was the better part of valor, promptly subsided, although Bryce could see that he was mumbling threats to himself, though not in an audible voice.

The demon Cardigan halted beside Shirley and stood gazing down at her. He was smiling at her whimsically. She met his glance for a few seconds; then her lids were lowered and she bit her lip with vexation.

"Shirley," he said.

"You are presumptuous," she quavered.

"You set me an example in presumption," he retorted good humoredly. "Did you not call me by my first name a minute ago?" The heir to Cardigan's redwoods bent over the girl. "You spoke to me—after your promise not to, Shirley," he said gently. "You will always speak to me."

She commenced to cry softly. "I loathe you," she sobbed.

"For you I have the utmost respect and admiration," he replied.

"No, you haven't. If you had, you wouldn't hurt my uncle—the only human being in all this world who is dear to me."

"Gosh!" he murmured plaintively. "I'm jealous of that man. However, I'm sorry I hurt him. I give you my word I came here to fight fairly—"

"He merely tried to stop you from fighting."

"No, he didn't, Shirley. He interfered and fouled me. Still, despite that, if I had known you were a spectator I think I should have controlled myself and refrained from pulling off my vengeance in your presence. I shall never cease to regret that I subjected you to such a distressing spectacle. I do hope, however, that you contentment to the food in the dust. "As you will it, Shirley." He turned away. "I'll send your axe back with the first trainload of logs from my camp, Colonel," he called to Pennington.

Once more he strode away into the timber. Shirley watched him pass out of her life, and gloried in what she conceived to be his agony, for she had both temper and spirit, and Bryce Cardigan calmly, blunderingly, rather stupidly (she thought) had presumed flagrantly on brief acquaintance.

The Colonel's voice broke in upon her bitter reflections. "That fellow Cardigan is a hard nut to crack—I'll say that for him." He had crossed the clearing to her side and was addressing her with his customary air of expansiveness. "I think, my dear, you had better go back into the caboose away from the prying eyes of these rough fellows. I'm sorry you came, Shirley. I'll never forgive myself for bringing you. If I had thought—but how could I know that scoundrel was coming here to raise a disturbance? And only last night he was at our house for dinner!"

"I wonder what could have occurred to make such a madman out of him?" the girl queried wonderingly. "He acted more like a demon than a human being."

"Just like his old father," the Colonel purred benevolently. "When he can't get what he wants, he sulks. I'll tell you what got on his confounded nerves. I've been freighting logs for the senior Cardigan over my railroad; the contract for hauling them was a heritage from Bill Henderson, from whom I bought the mill and timberlands; and of course as his assignee it was incumbent upon me to fulfill Henderson's contract with Cardigan even though the freight rate was ruinous."

"Well, this morning young Cardigan came to my office, reminded me that the contract would expire by limitation next year and asked me to renew it, and at the same freight rate. I offered to renew the contract but at a higher freight rate, and explained to him that I could not possibly continue to haul his logs at a loss. Well, right away he flew in a rage and called me a robber; whereupon I informed him that since he thought me a robber, perhaps we had better not attempt to have any business dealings with each other—that I really didn't want his contract at any price, having scarcely sufficient rolling stock to handle my own logs. That made him calm down, but in a little while he lost his head again and grew snarly and abusive—to such an extent, indeed, that finally I was forced to ask him to leave my office."

"Nevertheless, Uncle Seth, I cannot understand why he should make such a furious attack upon your employee."

The Colonel laughed with a fair imitation of sincerity and tolerant amusement. "My dear, that is no mystery to me. Cardigan picked on Rondeau for the reason that a few days ago he tried to hire Rondeau away from me—offered him twenty-five dollars a month more than I was paying him, by George! Of course when Rondeau came to me with Cardigan's proposition, I promptly met Cardigan's bid and retained Rondeau; consequently Cardigan hates us both and took the earliest opportunity to vent his spite on us."

The Colonel sighed and brushed the dirt and leaves from his tweeds. "Thunder!" he continued philosophically. "It's all in the game, so why worry over it? And why continue to discuss an unpleasant topic, my dear?"

Her uncle took her gently by the arm and steered her toward the caboose. "Well, what do you think of your company now?" he demanded gayly.

"I think," she answered soberly, "that you have gained an enemy worth while and that it behooves you not to underestimate him."

WOMEN WILL TAKE PART IN CONCLAVE

Equal Rights for all is Issue Before
Republican National Convention in June.

CONFERENCE CALLED MONDAY

New York Leads all States by Sending Twenty-two Women to Chicago Assemblage.

By United Press.
Chicago, May 7—Equal rights for all, will be one of the issues to confront Republican leaders when they meet here Monday to straighten out the knots in the Republican party in preparation for the national convention, according to women party leaders here today.

Women, it was stated, will make a stand at Monday's meeting of the committee for "fifty-fifty" representation on the national committee. Two women are now allowed the privilege of "sitting in" at meetings of the committee without voting power.

"Equal rights for all" said Mrs. Mabel Reinecke, executive secretary of the women's division of the national committee.

"The women want the right to be members of the national committee and they will fight for it. If they don't get it at the meeting Monday, they will probably take it up on the convention floor."

That women will figure prominently in the policy of the G. O. P. was indicated by the number of women delegates already elected to the convention, these leaders said. At least five of the delegates-at-large are women. Seventy-five women delegates in all have been elected.

Of the states which are sending women delegates to the Republican convention New York leads with a total of 22. Missouri is second with 19. Other states will send: Minnesota 7; Kansas 6; Oklahoma 4; Kentucky 3; Utah 2; Michigan 4; Iowa 2; Ills. 1; Arizona 1; Tennessee 2; South Dakota 1 and North Carolina 1.

Appointment of a temporary chairman of the convention will be the first important decision of the committeemen Monday.

Following this, plans for seating and distribution of tickets, will be adopted. When preparations for seating all delegates have been completed, then seating of contested delegates will be considered. States where contests are being made are: Florida 8, Georgia 17, South Carolina 11, Oklahoma 2, Minnesota 1, Mississippi 1, Tennessee 1 and Virginia 1.

"In Florida, Georgia and South Carolina, there are two sets of delegates fighting for the delegation from each state. Republicans say this is a small number of contests as compared with previous years. It indicates that the campaign being fought is a clean-cut one despite a spirited campaign" said E. V. Chilson, vice regional director of the national committee.

carefully remove it from the hook and tenderly throw it back into the water so that it will grow to be big and strong. Ehlers didn't exactly put it that way, but he said the law was enacted for the purpose of protecting small bass. Many streams are being restocked with bass and unless the fish are protected the work of the fisheries will be for nothing.

The law provides that when a party fishes outside of his own county or adjoining counties he must purchase from the clerk of the county a license. This is obtained at the cost of $1 and gives the holder permission to fish and hunt anywhere in the state.

Ehlers said that the wardens will be on the alert during the summer for violators of the regulations designed for the protection of fish and would return here "almost any day."

MEETING HELD BY PURDUE STUDENTS

Graduates and Former Students
Form Permanent Organization in Jackson County.

H. C. HENDERSON PRESIDENT

Thirty-six Purdue People in County and Twenty-five Others are Attending University.

H. C. Henderson, a member of the Shields high school faculty, was elected president of the Jackson county Purdue Alumni Association at a meeting of graduates and former students of the University at the high school building Thursday night. J. H. Andrews was elected vice-president, Miss Alice Luckey, secretary and treasurer.

The meeting which was held at the call of the University authorities was well attended by graduates, former students and those who have attended the short courses. There are thirty-six Purdue people in Jackson county and in addition twenty-five others are now students of the University.

The meeting was held on May 6 which is observed as Founder's Day throughout the state. At the meeting Thursday night it was voted to form a permanent organization to be known as the Jackson County Alumni Association and annual meeting will be held on May 6.

Following the business session a social hour was conducted during which refreshments were served. The meetings are expected to bring the graduates and former students of Purdue closer together and to result in additional Purdue interest in this county. Because of the diversified courses now offered by the institution many Jackson county people are personally interested in the work of the institution.
